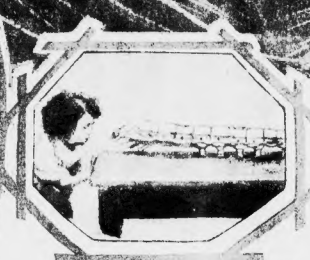
Teaching Children Not to be Afraid of Bugs and Beasts

THE NEWEST NATURAL HISTORY METHODS

TEACHING A CHILD TO KNOW A HARMLESS SNAKE.



AN INTERESTING MODEL OF [illegible] SHOWING HOW THE [illegible] IS PRODUCED

A HUGE MODEL TO TEACH A CHILD THE STRUCTURE OF THE HONEY BEE.

LEARNING TO BE FAMILIAR WITH THE [illegible] BEASTS

A PERFECT MODEL OF A FIELD BEETLE.

MAKING FRIENDS WITH THE BEAUTIFUL DEER.

"NEDDY" THE DONKEY, A PATIENT FRIEND.

A NEW system of familiarizing children with nature and animals has been introduced.

The pupils are taught to study the animals by living with them and playing with them as much as possible, and when that is not practicable, they are supplied with scientifically correct models, which show them what their humbler fellow-creatures are really like.

The children learn to distinguish between animals that are useful or harmless and those which are useless or dangerous. They are taken out into the fields and taught to observe the habits of the good animals and how to win their confidence. They learn to play with cows and horses, so that they may be able to get the most out of these worthy friends of man later on.

They study the habits of the bee, so that they may become industrious and learn other valuable lessons. They are taught not to fear the busy bee, who will not sting them unless discourteously treated, and that even with his sting the bee is much less to be feared than the filthy, common house-fly, which carries disease wherever it alights.

By natural object lessons the youngsters are taught the difference between venomous and non-venomous snakes. They learn that the latter form the great majority of all snakes, and that they are not only harmless, but quite serviceable to man, devouring noxious insects and performing other useful offices. Some parents are so enthusiastic for the new nature study that they send their children to menageries, as the accompanying photographs show in order that they may become acquainted with lions, orang-outangs and other beasts which are commonly misunderstood.

The proper study of nature will be greatly promoted by a wonderful series of new toys which have been constructed by a toy making firm of Berlin.

These toys represent animals, insects and flowers exactly as they are in nature, but on a greatly enlarged scale. All the organs, muscles, veins, arteries, nerves and hairs are represented. The colors are accurately reproduced. The animals can be taken apart, so that the inquiring child may see how the insides work. Many of the toys contain 60 parts.

It is widely recognized by scientific men that the usual crude and conventional toys are the means of spreading ignorance among the young, which sometimes persists during the rest of their lives. The city child who plays with a horse, having political ideas, often grows up without knowing the peculiar way in which the legs of the noble animal are jointed. When the child is taught to play with the new models he will begin life with correct ideas.

One of the handsomest of these toys is an Arab horse four feet high that can be divided into one hundred pieces. It shows three thousand parts of the animal's body. Then there is a gorilla five feet high, able to walk on all fours or stand upright, and otherwise made to represent nature. This toy is valuable as teaching the rich child what his family came from.

Large and expensive toys have, of course, been made for a long time, but the great merit of these new ones is that they are true to nature.

A monster silkworm makes a very interesting toy. The interior contains an exact representation of the worm's silk-producing apparatus, which can be made to work for the instruction of the fortunate child.

One set of toys shows the frog at all stages of his career—first as an egg and after that as a

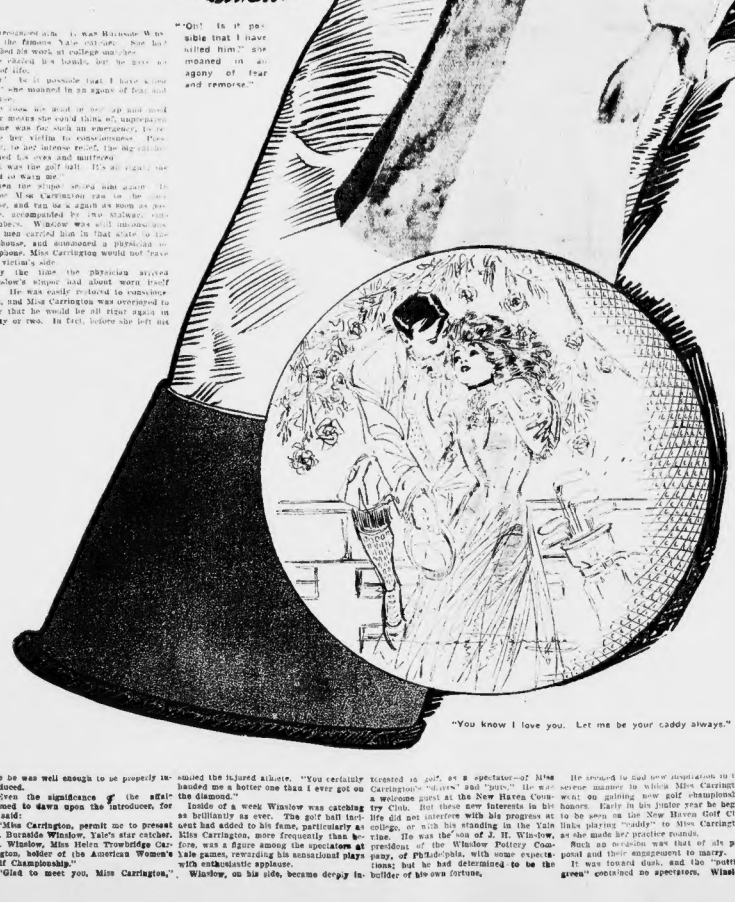
REMARKABLE ROMANCE of a GOLF BALL.

"Fore!" Cried Miss Carrington, but Too Late; Yale Catcher Winslow Dropped in His Tracks—To Be Tenderly Nursed by Her, to Become Her "Caddy," and Six Years Later Her Husband.

"Fore!" she called out sharply. "But the warning came too late. Suddenly she saw the man lift his hand to his head and fall like a log to the ground."

"Oh! is it possible that I have killed him?" she moaned in an agony of fear and remorse."



"You know I love you. Let me be your caddy always."

Burnside Winslow, Yale's Captain and Star Catcher.

JUST a little minute golf ball has proved as deadly as any arrow in Cupid's quiver.

Driven from "tee" by the fair golf champion hands of Miss Helen Trowbridge Carrington, it laid low one of Yale's biggest athletes—Burnside Winslow. And now they are happily married the charming belle of the American Women's Club golf championship and Yale's star baseball catcher for four years.

For society that element about the affair makes this a new departure in romances. Usually it is the dainty, bejeweled and bedazzling feminine visitor from a distance, who, as enthusiastic spectator of championship college games, suddenly lets way into the heart of the athletic hero of the hour and wins him for her own own.

This time it is a champion for the New Women gets the girl who is a champion athlete herself. And therefore, for an age of Miss Carrington and "Bill" Burnside Winslow was an extraordinary occasion in the society that clusters about Yale.

It was especially signalized by an afternoon tea and reception in the bride and bridegroom given by Walter Camp, author of Yale athletics, and Mrs. Camp, at which scores of former Yale athletic stars were present to do homage to the wedded champions.

Such a handsome couple they made! And smiling gossip hinted over the happy

"Helen is a lucky girl," said Miss Fannie Mackey, of Boston, to Miss Catherine Shreve, also of Boston, and both of them onetime golf champions themselves.

"Indeed she is. If I isn't every bride who can look back on six delightful years of courtship."

"You Cupid surely must have had a hand in bringing them together while Burnside was still a sophomore with his way to make in the world."

"Why, certainly; it was Cupid himself who touched with his keenest tipped arrow Helen's golf ball just as she drove it full two hundred yards across the links into Burnside's right temple."

The best man, drinking tea as though his life depended on it, beamed on the happy couple. He was Charles French Stoddard, former famous first baseman for the Andover Academy nine, who made a romantic marriage with Sandol Milliken, the actress. He was exchanging reminiscences with a Yale alumnus halfback.

"I always said Winslow was born with a lucky spoon in his mouth. He was catcher at Andover when I was playing first base there. He was a wonder. I could have foretold his success at Yale, where, you know, he was star catcher for four years and the last two years captain of the nine. And then to be knocked straight into a clean-up romance by a golf ball!"

Over those cups of tea the details of the golf ball romance were recalled. The beginning was six years ago. Winslow was then in the sophomore class at Yale, and the best catcher the Yale nine had ever had—a young giant on the diamond who seemed invincible.

As he was not a golfer, it happened that he had not yet met Miss Helen Trowbridge Carrington, daughter of J. E. Carrington, the New Haven publisher, although she had already captured the American women's golf championship at the tournament held on the Wee Burn links at Stamford, Conn.

One day—a pleasant, late September day—the big catcher was treating himself to a stroll over the links of the New Haven Country Club. As he strolled he took casual note of a graceful and alert girlish figure on the "driving ground." She was a stranger to him, so he gave her no further attention.

Miss Carrington was out for a trial round of the links. It was her determination to hold against all comers the club's championship honors—in which determination, by the way, she was destined to succeed.

She placed her ball nicely on the "tee" and took position for one of her famous drives. With a vigorous stroke she struck the ball fairly, saying to herself:

"Two hundred yards, not an inch less."

In the instant of her recovery after the stroke she saw that the ball was sailing straight for a man on the links, who was evidently unconscious of his danger.

"Fore!" she called out sharply.

But the warning came too late. Suddenly she saw the man lift his hand to his head and fall like a log to the ground.

Filled with alarm, Miss Carrington sped over the intervening space and dropped on her knees beside the prostrate figure. There was a swelling, purpling bruise on his right temple, and close beside him lay her golf ball that had done the damage.

The man was unconscious. Miss Carrington recognized him. It was Burnside Winslow, the famous Yale catcher. She had watched his work at college matches.

She raised his head, but he gave no sign of life.

"Oh! is it possible that I have killed him?" she moaned in an agony of fear and remorse.

She took his head in her lap and used every means she could think of, unprofessional as she was for such an emergency, to restore her victim to consciousness. Presently he did utter a low moan. He opened his eyes and muttered:

"It was the golf ball. It's all right. She tried to warn me."

Then the stupid school man came to Miss Carrington ran to the clubhouse, and ran as much as possible, accompanied by two stalwart members. Winslow was still unconscious. The men carried him in that state to the clubhouse, and summoned a physician by telephone. Miss Carrington would not leave her victim's side.

By the time the physician arrived Winslow's senses had about worn itself out. He was easily restored to consciousness, and Miss Carrington was overjoyed to hear that he would be all right again in a day or two. In fact, before she left she had been a talkative patient. She had even attempted watching with a mischievous twinkle in her eyes, her graceful figure and the pretty nurse costume with which Miss Carrington had provided herself.

Up to this time they had been a well-mannered athletic team. The rest of their story, as Winslow now tells it, is decidedly an even more romantic one. He was seized with a sense of the beauty of the girl who had been the innocent cause of his injury. He had never before seen a girl who was so perfectly and gracefully dressed in the golf costume

Are Kisses Necessities or Luxuries?

IT seems to be quite right to assume that where kissing is not a necessity it is a luxury. So if a young man sees a pretty girl in the street and kisses her, as young men sometimes do, and is arrested for it, as young men sometimes are, and has to pay a fine, he cannot grumble, for most luxuries have to be paid for.

Of course, it depends upon who is kissed. Kisses exchanged between girls seem to be neither necessities nor luxuries. They are certainly not luxuries, or they would not be taken with such nonchalance. They seem to come under the heading of "Goods to Newcastle," and are not mainly bought by young men, "A waste of good material." It is said that there are sufficient kisses wasted yearly by young women on one another, on pet dogs, cats and babies to make half the bachelors in the world deliriously happy for a month.

The luxury of a kiss lies in the person kissed; at least, so it is supposed. This is not altogether right. The pretty face of a nice girl always attracts the kisser, and such pretty faces have won elections and made money for church fairs by harvesting kisses. But there is no luxury in such kisses. One must first be specially interested in the girl; a kiss on the cheek must value a blush to be enjoyed, and a kiss on the lips must feel an answering pressure.

Experts say that one-sided kissing hasn't much flavor, and that a girl who does not know how to kiss will never be attractive to a man until she learns.

Kisses that are expected to be magnetic in this way do not seem to come within the category of other luxuries or necessities. Ben Jonson says: "A soft lip would tempt you to eternity of kissing," which proves that there is a charm in kissing about as dominant as its sole charm which makes kissing so popular.

Men is a bold creature and must be doing to all he does. Studying is one of its faults, and if he can take something for a girl reasonably a pretty girl, he must do take that something. Zing Cache does very often. Some lips tempt a man out of himself, and these have come to be kissing. Indulging in a kisser monthly that they may never lose their charm to be bachelor's wife.

The kisser who can be young is one of other and that embraces more. I may come under the indolence, or stupor of a kiss correct, or solemnly given with years of faith.

The lover's kiss is one of the earnest communications of the heart's affection. It varies as love does, and serves to record the rise and fall, the weakness, or strength of a passion. With disillusion the kiss becomes cold and the lover finds it difficult to keep up a show of affection. The happily married pair never cease to kiss as fondly as in their courting days.

There is no greater standard of kissing beyond this distinction of luxuries and necessities. Different people set a different value on a kiss, and the value may depend on how the person is brought up and the notion she has had regarding the kiss.

Some girls place so high a value on their kisses as to reserve them only for the man whom they are to marry, and deny him access to them until after the proposal. This, according to the novelists, is quite correct, the first kiss being that bestowed when the hero seizes the heroine in his arms after the proposal.

Secrets of the Wild Life of the Crown Prince

As Told In the Diary of Mme. Kremer, Appointed by King Frederick as Royal Governess for Little Princess Monica.

My Diary.

Dresden.
End of October, 1905.

A DIARY! Me! I used to laugh at it as something quite affected. And now I myself am going to be a keeper of Princesses.

I buy diary day to a diary for names in Florence and being back the little Princess in the Royal Court in Dresden.

Two years have gone by since the notorious Monti affair, out of which the comic papers made such reckless copy. The result of Franlein Mathy's indiscretion was, as all the world knows, that Anna Monica Pia, Duchess of Saxony, was left with her mother. The Countess Louise of Montignoso, Princess of Tuscany (and, as such, Her Imperial Highness), actually succeeded in being allowed to keep her Monti two years longer than had been arranged.

But the Countess Montignoso knew how to make her conditions, too, and so she demanded that the future governess should be one who was to be selected by the King herself, immediately before the handing over of the Princess, to undertake her education in Florence for one month, in order that the Countess might have some personal knowledge of her child's teacher, and also in order that the Princess might grow accustomed to this new instructress so that the transfer from the mother's hands to strange ones after all, the royal father is a total stranger to the poor little Princess might not be quite so distressing to her.

I shall come to know, in her intimate, everyday life, the much-loved, much-abused Louise of the Saxon Court! I shall have an opportunity of finding out for myself how it is possible that thousands of Saxon hearts should still cherish an extravagant devotion for this woman veritable problem as it is of the psychology of a people, of the hysteria of the mob. I shall get to know something of a character when is a problem, too accurately not to be judged by any moral patterns; neither that of court etiquette, nor that of the self-respecting folk, nor yet that of the hypnotized so-called "sympathetic" people.

By Command of the King.

October 30.

Little are my instructions: I am to start at once in my absence, there to acquaint myself with the details of the system adopted for Princess Monica. To do so for the present, and I am to try as far as I can to make the child accustomed to me. The Countess has promised to decide finally in the course of a month whether she will entrust her pet exclusively to me. It follows naturally from that I am to try to gain the confidence of the Countess Montignoso the most difficult task of all.

When the time of probation is over and the Princess has been given to me, I am to behave myself with her wherever His Majesty the King Friedrich August of Saxony was concerned, consequently in the character of his child-friend, to the Countess's brother in law, Prince of Hohenshine, then to another princely house and finally to Dresden, when Via Monica and her educating together with her brothers and sisters. In November I enter upon my duties in Florence. My arrival will be announced to the Countess by wire.

First Meeting With the Princess.

October 31.

A DAY on the road, and that is not exactly pleasant for any one who is not accustomed to travelling! I intend to do the forty hour journey without stopping. My arrival was announced to the Countess for 4.48 in the afternoon of October 31. How will she receive me? With due ceremony only the emissary of her dethroned brother-in-law, but let me feel it? What will the first meeting be like? I've had lots of time to picture it all to myself.

A step.

"Florence?" Here I am!

In the midst of the deafening noise of the [illegible] of the pushing of passengers and porters, and calling and hallooing in my ear, I am [illegible] by a [illegible] in the uniform of the Countess Montignoso of whom I know nothing whatever, and all I know of her would probably bore you. So I add:

"Frau Kremer."

"Ah!" was the answer in Swiss-German; "she is expecting you. I am the lady's maid of Her [illegible]."

I introduce myself and my belongings to the [illegible] and [illegible] to Bellosguardo, the highest [illegible] of Florence, the [illegible] villa in [illegible], belonging to the Countess Montanto, now known as the Countess Montignoso. It was almost dark when good Tamino, the cabman, who ever since the desert began had been going through desperate exertions, pulled up at the gate of the villa, the high tower of which is the only part visible from the outside. The gate was opened; the carriage rolled in between tall bushes, and stopped before the open hall door.

I shivered. The hall was only dimly lit by a shaded lamp. All I could see in a hasty survey was that a crimson-carpeted staircase on the right leads to the upper stories. There wasn't a servant to be seen. I stepped back irresolutely to look after my luggage. Just then a slender, white-robed apparition came down the stairs, leading a little girl by the hand. I felt quite sure of myself this time—it must Franlein Haubold and her little Princess! I went up to them and said, very politely: "Franlein Haubold?"

"Oh, please not!" the apparition laughed. "I'm Her Imperial Highness herself. How are you? Did you have a comfortable journey, Frau Kremer? And are you? I've brought Monti too, Monti; give Frau Kremer your hand, and be sweet and good!"

I was thunderstruck. For this I was not prepared! I tried to examine myself. A gay laugh dispelled me at last, and then I bent down to little toddlekins. The small dusky child snuggled up to her mother as if frightened, and looked at me nervously out of the corners of her eyes. Of course, for the poor child I was something like the postman who drove dad in the children's eyes, and takes them away in his box!

"Want a little," I thought; "we'll soon be good friends."

Little Princess Monica.

November 1.

I was half past eight before I was awakened by Franlein Haubold.

"Your Imperial Highness wishes to know if you have had a good night's rest. Didn't you hear the storm raging this morning? She is gone to early mass. Ah!" added Franlein, with a pious, upward glance, "she goes to Mass every morning!"

I went up to breakfast and found my little charge there. She is truly a lovely creature, this sweet wee Anna Monika Pia of mine. She seems to me even prettier than the innumerable photographs of her, which for the most part are somewhat affected looking, artificial in pose and expression.

The great beauty of the little one is the eyes. They are of the most wonderful size and depth, of dark color, their shape is exquisite, and they are expressive beyond anything that I could have dreamed of in so young a child.

They are like Mignon's eyes, those mysterious star like orbs, with their deep, dark orbs, and the glorious fringe of greenish light. Her dark hair is curly and her skin is flower-like. The little body is fine in its dainty grace; yet already, for all its calm, gone and its lightness, there is a certain air of pride about the child, as if she knew how important she is and how much depends upon her. I doesn't take one long to recognize the reality in her. Through, even in slightly obstinate and defiant look about the rosy lips, which enhances this impression. The coloring is of Southern warmth. Even her body is quite dark, not at all the clear pink and white of German children.

Her Royal Highness Louise.

November 2.

ALL SOULS' DAY! I was so very much to do today, but I couldn't make up my mind to go to Mass; it seems to me much more important to make myself thoroughly acquainted with my new duties. As I want to learn all about the personal care of the little Princess, I presented myself in her bedroom at half-past seven, when she had her bath. The business of the morning, bath is a very troublesome one, on account of the extremely perfunctory water arrangements, the housemaid Severina, has to get up shortly before four to light the fire in the bath-stove, for it takes quite four hours to heat the water in the tub for the regular "morning bath."

It seems that Monica has a veritable passion for taking baths and washing herself generally. Fred tell me that she knows no greater joy than splashing about in lots of water. She doesn't care whether it's hot or cold; so long as it's water she's satisfied. Her bath is a most ridiculous affair. Her whole body is not only sponged and rubbed, but actually brushed!

Then comes the cold douche over on the face, then over the whole body, and it astonishes one freshly every time to see the evident delight with which the little creature lets the cold stream flow all over her, even though her arms get quite blue with the chill. When the bath is over, the locks are carefully brushed, and the rebellious curls are combed and smoothed. Then we go to the dining room for morning coffee. Every morning there is good, strong coffee, buttered toast, and honey, and milk for the child.

The Princess came in to lunch again just the same as yesterday. She was quite as studiously sweet to me as before, and gave me a splendid opportunity of studying her. I had heard so many contradictory things about the lady, and seen so many pictures of her, that I was most deeply interested in this chance of making acquaintance with her so closely and intimately.

Although she wears rouge, paddle-height and fencing school, where she is taking lessons in "the shades with rich tints the peculiarity of looking full art of the rapier" under the best fencing master in face, her features are not at all ugly, but are rather Florence, Signor Scelini. After her fencing lesson, pleasing. Her figure is also redeemed by the fine figure a note, at the "Roman Baths" and then pays visits. movements are quite and extremely, not to say jerky. Her complexion is fine, but marred by a troublesome flush, which is particularly noticeable across the nose and the upper part of the cheeks.

Like Monica, the Princess has a veritable mania for water—cold or hot. No day goes by without the morning bath, and many soothing "all-over" washes besides.

Of course her complexion suffers. Her features are haughty, even noble. Energy and strong will are stamped upon her face, despite its kindliness. But one longs to be able to hide the mouth; it again white; but, at the same time, she is very much interested in the snowpack, for whenever she picks up a stone, a leaf, an acorn, or any other little thing, she always asks what color it is.

"Do tell me, Frau Kremer, what color the sky is."

"The sky is blue."

"What color is the house?"

"The house is red."

Then I begin to examine her.

"Now it's your turn Monti. What color is the sky?"

"The sky is red."

"No, no! the sky is blue and the house is red; and now, what color is the gate?"

"The gate is" — But she has forgotten.

The children playing on the road-side, too, give Monti cause for profound reflection.

"Monti can't hear babies."

"Why can't Monti hear babies?"

"Because babies is so [illegible]."

"But why do you say babies are shy Monti? How do you know they are?"

"Because Monti will kill babies—Monti will kill babies—Monti will kill babies—

TWO HEAVY HANDICAPS

W E have often talked about "What makes SUCCESS." He seems to be about two things that make FAILURE.

Failure, like everything else, has many ingredients. It is a hash, containing all human weaknesses. In a man's failure there is to begin with hereditary taints of his ancestors against which he fails to fight.

There is PROCRASTINATION—a vast amount of it. Putting things off has kept many a nose on the grindstone.

There is VANITY. The man busy deceiving HIMSELF has no time for more useful effort.

There is SUSPICION—he who can't trust others will not have others trust him.

INTEMPERANCE, LAZINESS and a thousand other big and little defects are back up on the back of failure.

We have selected to-day for especial discussion JEALOUSY, the father of millions of failures, and LOOKING BACKWARD, which means wasting time and regret on that which is irrevocable.

Success, on a base, means ENERGY WELL APPLIED. And anything that causes misapplied energy, that makes [illegible] means failure or even [illegible] success.

The pictures are self-explanatory. The picture at the top of this page is for the young, the picture at the bottom of the page is for the old and the middle-aged.

Jealousy is as cruel as the grave: "The coals thereof are coals of fire, which hath a most vehement flame." Song of Songs, VIII, 6.

The Valley of Despair by Ella Wheeler Wilcox

Copyright 1908, by American Journal Examiner

The Lady of Tears

Through valley and hamlet and city
Wherever humanity dwells,
With a heart full of infinite pity,
A breast that with sympathy swells,
She walks in her beauty immortal,
Each household grows sad as she nears,
But she crosses at length every portal,
The mystical Lady of Tears.

If never this vision of sorrow
Has shadowed your life in the past,
You will meet her, I know, some to-morrow—
She visits all heartsthrone at last.
To bowed, and cottage, and palace,
To servant and king she appears,
And offers the gall of her chalice—
The unwelcome Lady of Tears.

By Ella Wheeler Wilcox

To the eyes that have smiled but in gladness,
To the souls that have basked in the sun,
She seems, in her garments of sadness,
A creature to dread and to shun.
And lips that have drunk but of pleasure
Grow pallid and tremble with fears
As she portions that unto them her measure,
The merciless Lady of Tears.

But in midnight lone hearts that are breaking
With the agonized numbness of grief
Are saved from the torture of breaking
By her bitter-sweet draught of relief.
Oh, then do all graces enfold her!
Like a goddess she looks and appears,
And the eyes overflow that behold her—
The beautiful Lady of Tears.

BANK OFFICERS IN "THE BOY AND THE GIRL" AT THE HOLLIS ST. THEATRE

BANK OFFICERS ARE GREAT AS "GIRLS"

The fact that some of the bank officers appearing in the new musical comedy, "The Boy and the Girl," which is to be the coming play at the Hollis Street Theatre, are to be seen in the cast of Park Square Theatre attractions, has caused a rush for seats for the performances of the latter. Both companies are playing prosperous engagements at the two theatres.

The bankers took to acting as a diversion from their regular duties. They started in a small way, but soon developed into a company of considerable merit. Their first appearance was in a farce, "Box and Cox," and was followed by "Turned Up." Then they presented a musical comedy, "The Bandit of Hollywood," which was so successful that they were induced to repeat it at the Park Square Theatre. Their latest production is "The Tattooed Prince," which they are to present at the Hollis Street Theatre.

The bankers have a company of about thirty members, and the cast of "The Boy and the Girl" will include fifteen of them. Among those who will appear are Frederick Ayer, Jr., of the Second National Bank, who will play the part of a comedian; Frederick Ayer, 3d, of the Second National Bank, who will play the part of a soubrette; Frederick Ayer, 4th, of the Second National Bank, who will play the part of a juvenile; Frederick Ayer, 5th, of the Second National Bank, who will play the part of a character actor; Frederick Ayer, 6th, of the Second National Bank, who will play the part of a heavy; Frederick Ayer, 7th, of the Second National Bank, who will play the part of a leading lady; Frederick Ayer, 8th, of the Second National Bank, who will play the part of a leading man; Frederick Ayer, 9th, of the Second National Bank, who will play the part of a director; Frederick Ayer, 10th, of the Second National Bank, who will play the part of a manager; Frederick Ayer, 11th, of the Second National Bank, who will play the part of a stage manager; Frederick Ayer, 12th, of the Second National Bank, who will play the part of a property man; Frederick Ayer, 13th, of the Second National Bank, who will play the part of a scene painter; Frederick Ayer, 14th, of the Second National Bank, who will play the part of a carpenter; Frederick Ayer, 15th, of the Second National Bank, who will play the part of a electrician; Frederick Ayer, 16th, of the Second National Bank, who will play the part of a musician; Frederick Ayer, 17th, of the Second National Bank, who will play the part of a singer; Frederick Ayer, 18th, of the Second National Bank, who will play the part of a dancer; Frederick Ayer, 19th, of the Second National Bank, who will play the part of a actor; Frederick Ayer, 20th, of the Second National Bank, who will play the part of a actress.

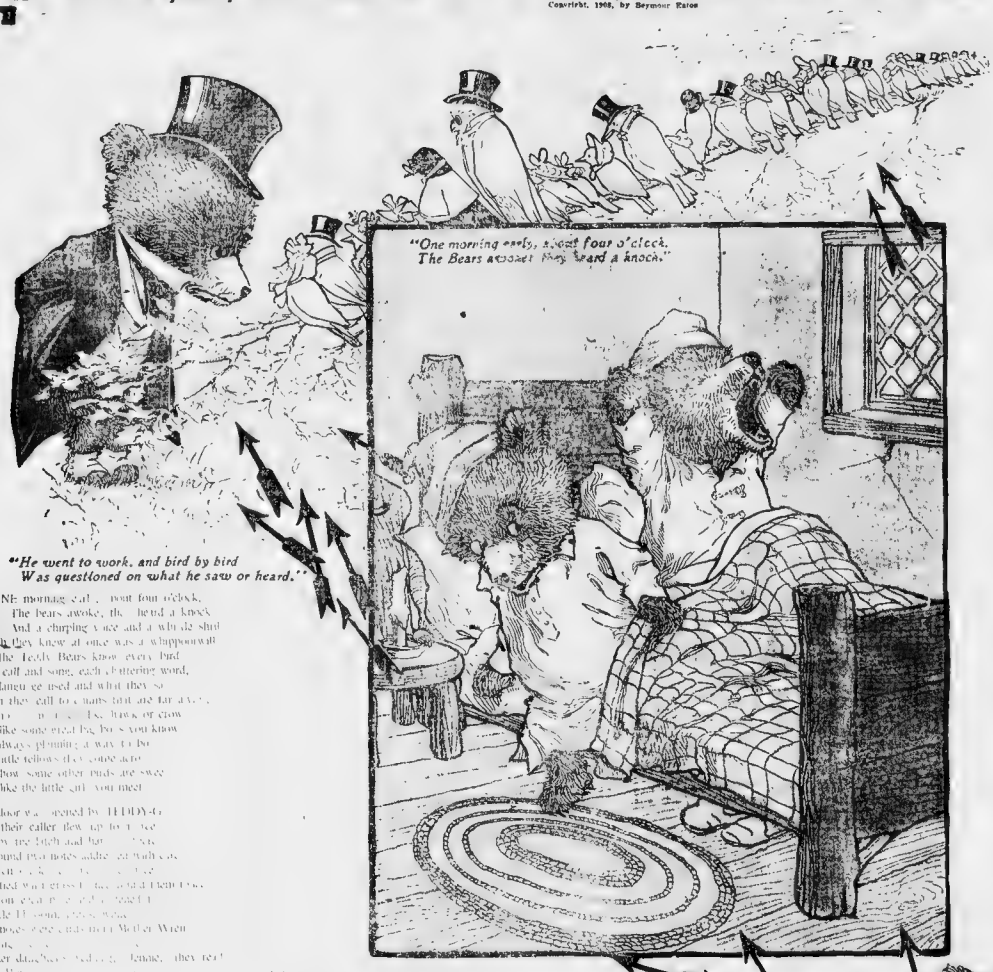
TEDDY-B AND TEDDY-G: THE BEAR DETECTIVES

No. XII.—Mystery of a Fatal Arrow. Verses by Seymour Eaton. Drawings by C. H. Twelvetrees.

Copyright, 1908, by Seymour Eaton



"One morning early, about four o'clock,
The Bears aroused by a hard knock."

"He went to work, and bird by bird
Was questioned on what he saw or heard."

ONE morning early, about four o'clock,
The bears awoke, they heard a knock
And a chirping voice and a whistle shrill
Which they know at once was a whippoorwill
For the Teddy Bears know every bird
Each call and song, each chattering word,
The language used and what they say
When they call to mates and far away
And how each flock, hawk or crow
Just like some real boys you know
Are always planning a way to do
The little fellows they come across
And how some other birds are sweet
Just like the little girl you meet

The door was opened by TEDDY-G
And their caller flew up to his knee
But by the pitch and hurried words
He found two notes and three old birds
Written [illegible]
And had what crossed the road been done
And on each note was pinned a seed
A little thread, yellow, red and blue
The notes were each from Mother Wren
Invitin[illegible]
To her daughter's wedding, Jennie, they read
"And Robin [illegible]
And the wedding [illegible] guests will dine
On cherry pie and currant wine."

The Teddy Bears arrived at ten
At Jennie's home in Belle Glen,
Where blossoms bloomed and a babbling brook
And pond [illegible] a pretty nook
In which [illegible] from every tree
A song
At the [illegible] gay
And at the [illegible] limb,
And, not content, [illegible] to rest
To every one was a special chair
And Blackbirds [illegible] a flowery arch
To hum together the wedding march,
And a table [illegible] with food
In [illegible]
And [illegible] to sing,
And a nut [illegible] round to ring

A berry red hung on a twig,
And a woodpecker to dance a jig,
And sparrows and swallows flying round,
And flowers strewn all about the ground,
The prettiest sight the bears had seen
Since Cinderella became a queen.

When the bears arrived the woods were still,
Till a piercing whistle by the whippoorwill
Was the signal sound for all to heed
That the ceremony would now proceed.
As the march began a big black crow
And Blackbirds four stood in a row,
The crow with spectacles and band
And he and gown and book in hand.
And on each side the Blackbirds bold,
Each with a stem tipped off with gold,
Groomsman in front, Robin's friend a jay,
With suit of blue and vest of gray

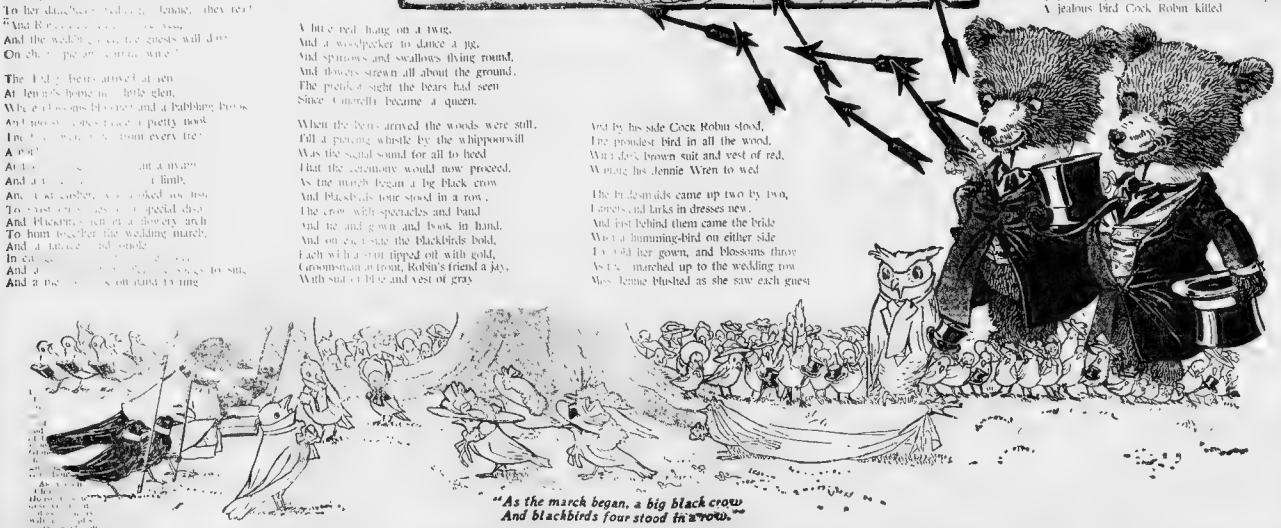
And by his side Cock Robin stood,
The proudest bird in all the wood,
With doe's brown suit and vest of red,
Waiting his Jennie Wren to wed

The bridesmaids came up two by two,
Larks and larks in dresses new.
And first behind them came the bride
With a humming-bird on either side
To hold her gown, and blossoms throw
As they marched up to the wedding tow
Miss Jennie blushed as she saw each guest
Seek her place, and the crow began
She took her place, and the crow began
To open [illegible] voice: "You take this man
To [illegible] cherish the best you can?"
She answered "Yes," and then he said,
"Will Robin take this girl to wed?"
This answer came from Robin's heart,
"I Jennie wed till death us part"
As on her toe was placed a ring
The thrush and warbler began to sing,
The Teddy Bears were the first folks there
To congratulate the happy pair

The service o'er, the merry crowd
Was enjoying the feast and chattering loud
When an arrow whizzed right by each guest
And pierced Cock Robin through the breast.
The pain was great, in a whisper weak
To TEDDY-B he was heard to speak,
And as he finished tumbled dead.
But these are the words poor Robin said:
"Go find the bird that pulled that bow,
Make him and his relations go
From woods and fields, from flower and tree
To the ocean waves of the wildest sea;
When this you've done please search the glen,
For a pretty home for Jennie Wren,
And ask her, please, no tears to shed,
For she and Robin are ever wed,"
The feast was stopped, the birds were still,
Except this call from the whippoorwill:
"Express your sorrow to Jennie Wren
But till you're searched don't leave the glen;
The murderer is still at large
But the Teddy Bears have the case in charge."

TEDDY-G was mad right through and through,
And said it was hawk or owl he knew;
But TEDDY-B said it wasn't so—
That a jealous bird had drawn the bow
He went to work and bird by bird
Was questioned on what he saw or heard,
And the arrow measured and the direction shot,
And the distance from Robin to the very spot
Where the murderer sat up on tree
Where he the wedding feast could see.
And as they searched the ground below
TEDDY-B caught sight of a little bow
And a small brown bird lying on his back,
With his toes caught in the bow-string crack
He tried to cover his face with leaves
The way birds hide by make-believes,
But TEDDY-B was a detective bear,
And made him confess right then and there
That the reason he pulled that fatal string
Was because he had bought an engagement ring
To give to Jennie himself that day,
And Robin had won her heart away

This bird was punished by TEDDY-B
To ocean waves of the wildest sea,
To never return, and the story's true
That all his brothers and sisters, too,
Were sent to live on the ocean wave
To make them for ever and ever behave
And when as you cross the ocean blue
You see little birds that you never knew
Could live so far from wood and tree,
Flying about so lonesomely,
You know the reason: Some blood was spilled;
A jealous bird Cock Robin killed



"As the march began, a big black crow
And blackbirds four stood in a row."

Seven Proofs That Motherhood Does Not Ruin a Woman's Voice

ME. SCHUMANN-HEINK, who in private life is Mrs. William Rapp, Jr., is a devoted wife and mother and is never so happy as when she is with her children

THE children in the picture, reading from left to right are Henry, the eldest, then Hans, Walter, Ferdinand, George Washington, and last of all, Maria Therese.

THERE are seven arguments to prove that maternity does not prevent a woman from being a genuine singer.

Mme. Schumann-Heink is one of them. So is Mrs. William Rapp, Jr., in real life.

Henry, Hans, Walter, Ferdinand, George Washington and Maria Theresa, Rapp are the other six arguments.

HOUSE WORK

Thousands of American women in our homes are daily sacrificing their lives to duty.

In order to keep the home neat and pretty, the children well dressed and tidy, women overdo. A female weakness or displacement is often brought on and they suffer in silence, drifting along from bad to worse, knowing well that they ought to have help to overcome the pains and aches which daily make life a burden.

It is to these faithful women that comes as a boon and a blessing, as it did to Mrs. F. Ellsworth, of Maxville, N. Y., and to Mrs. W. P. Boyd, of Beaver Falls, Pa., who say:

LYDIA E. PINKHAM'S VEGETABLE COMPOUND

"I was not able to do my own work, owing to female trouble from which I suffered. Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound helped me wonderfully, and I am so well that I can do as big a day's work as I ever did. I wish every sick woman would try it.

FACTS FOR SICK WOMEN.

For thirty years Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, made from roots and herbs, has been the standard remedy for female ills, and has positively cured thousands of women who have been troubled with displacements, inflammation, ulceration, fibroid tumors, irregularities, periodic pains, backache, that bearing-down feeling, flatulency, indigestion, dizziness, or nervous prostration. Why don't you try it?

Mrs. Pinkham invites all sick women to write her for advice. She has guided thousands to health. Address, Lynn, Mass.

"THIS is a most shocking tragedy," said Viscount De Valle Da Cista, Portugal consul in Boston, at his residence, No. 28 Main street, Somerville last night to a reporter for the Boston Sunday American before he could say anything upon the assassination of King Carlos and the crown prince.

REBELS FIRE UPON RULERS IN CARRIAGE

Queen Vainly Tries to Shield Royal Heir; Second Son Also Wounded; Chaos at Capital and Nation Trembles.

Lisbon, Feb. 1. King Carlos and Crown Prince Luiz Phillippe were shot dead as they drove into Lisbon this afternoon from the Villa Vicosa in an open carriage.

A party of regicides had been lying in wait for the royal carriage at the Prada Commercio and the Rua de Arsenal. As the vehicle appeared the conspirators leaped forward, pulled carbines from under their cloaks and fired a volley.

The King and the Crown Prince, upon whom the attack was directed, were each shot three times, and they lived only long enough to be carried to the marine arsenal near by, where they expired.

Almost at the first shot the King fell back on the cushions, and at the same moment the Crown Prince, whom Queen Amalie sought in vain to shield with her body, was seen to half rise and then sink back on the seat.

Two bullets had struck Prince Manual, one on the jaw, the other on the arm.

One of the regicides, of whom there were several, committed suicide after being placed in prison. It is charged that one of the murderers was a Spaniard named Cordova. The names of the others are unknown.

The bodies of the King and Crown Prince were removed from the Marine Arsenal in two closed carriages to the royal palace, the Paco das Necessidades, the late residence of the King, escorted by municipal guards.

Mobs are sweeping the streets of Lisbon. The city is in a state of anarchy. The better class of citizens are barricaded in their homes. The complete overthrow of the monarchy and the proclamation of a republic apparently is imminent.

The assassination was unquestionably the result of to-day's decree authorizing Premier Franco and his colleagues to expel political "undesirables" from the country.

The decree broadly put Portugal on the level of an iron-handed autocracy. All rights [illegible] are suspended. Most significant was the pro-

CITY OF LISBON, AT MERCY OF REBELS, IN THE GRIP OF TERROR

REVOLUTIONISTS PREPARE TO PROCLAIM A REPUBLIC AT ONCE

Confusion Reigns in the Capital of Portugal, and Report Has It That the Rebels Have Succeeded in Seizing the Reins of Government.

amble to the decree which declared that these measures were necessary in order that the country might not be "deluged with blood."

Vengeance of People Aroused

Within two hours after the promulgation of the drastic decree, the country is, indeed, "deluged in blood." And not for the lack of these autocratic measures, it appears, but because of [illegible] in spite of them.

It is now seen that for the past month the stage has been setting for this tremendous tragedy of Kings and Princes. For fully that time, Lisbon, reflecting conditions throughout the kingdom, has been in constant turmoil. The growing severity of the measures of oppression, and the dictatorship of Premier Franco, the numerous arrests, the domiciliary visits, and the general brutality of the police, all combined to feed those passions on which revolutions thrive.

Kings seldom profit by experience. Carlos was no wiser than Louis XVI. Premier Franco was allowed a free hand. Absolutely inflexible within the past week he announced a determination either to banish or exile all suspects, regardless of rank or position.

He destroyed the liberty of the press, suppressed all public meetings, harshly repressed all street manifestations of any kind, and turned loose a strong street patrol, which by day and by night has held in terror practically the entire population of Lisbon.

Rights of the Nation Ignored.

It was not the rabble alone that felt the stern hand of oppression. There were conditions that were intolerable to people of the highest class as well as those of the gutter. In an insidious, indefinable but deadly manner the divine right of the King came into direct conflict with the rights of a whole people living in the twentieth century of the Christian era. The result was inevitable.

El Correio, in its last issue before suspension, a few days ago, thus aptly summed up the situation:

"We are living in a reign of terror such as often precedes the downfall of a corrupt government.

"We are [illegible] force the fulfillment of a sinister prediction to [illegible] arch on quick steps on the King and his hereditary successor fell to death, the head of assassins, and the government came toppling down under the maddening force of a revolutionary movement that may shake Portugal to the last, republics.

Carlos was warned. His own son—now dead—besides him, an innocent victim to the blind rascality of the politicians—counselled moderation [illegible] oppression of the arch representative of tyranny.

URGED THE KING TO REFLECT.

Many Republicans, and even scores of Royalists, believe that by giving the country to avoid the possibility of arousal, [illegible] the King to pause and reflect. Instead [illegible] of several days ago [illegible] number of very step he took and set [illegible] minister predicted was the last King and Premier would ever [illegible] fall together.

Driven [illegible] that point before, the end might not have been averted but for the fatal government decree that was gazetted to-day.

It struck the final drop note of tyranny. Armed with it, France had the people at her mercy—driven into a corner, with power to send any citizen of high or low degree into exile at [illegible] on mere suspicion, and it put [illegible] beyond appeal. [illegible] tenced for [illegible] accused no crime. It [illegible] and [illegible] [illegible] [illegible]

WM. D. HAYWOOD

By Elias A. McQuaid.

William Dudley Haywood, secretary-treasurer of the Western Federation of Miners, whom President Roosevelt arraigned as an "undesirable citizen," while he was on trial at Boise last July at Boise, Idaho, for an alleged conspiracy in the murder of former ex-governor Steunenberg of that commonwealth, will speak at Faneuil Hall next Monday night on "The Class Struggle in the West." The meeting, open to the public, is under the auspices of the Meyer Henry George conference of last May, which, in an incredibly short time, raised $4,000 here for the Moyer-Haywood-Pettibone defense.

Haywood is at the Quincy House. In the course of a few minutes he will tell his story of the Federation's industrial contest in New England. Later he takes up at more length the Western Labor situation.

DECLARES SHE IS HAUNTED

Accused of Slaying Art Through Jealousy of Fair Alexis Guerin.

SHE IS CHIEF WITNESS.

CHICAGO, Feb. 1 – That Mrs. Dora McDonald, widow of Michael Cassius McDonald, the "Gamblers' King," who is on trial here charged with the murder of Artist Alexis Guerin in his studio in January 21 last, did not hold a revolver when Guerin was shot and that a point-to-day scored by [illegible] Hamilton Lewis for the [illegible]

The point scored by the defense startled the crowded court room. It had been known all along that Mrs. McDonald was not carrying the revolver when the shot was fired, but the prosecution was able to [illegible] with startling force.

Save $3 a Week

Suppose you can save three dollars a week from your salary and you work for the same company and expect a raise in the near future. You make the payment every week or month until your contract matures and you have accumulated a few hundred dollars.

On these accumulations you receive interest at the rate of three per cent a year, as well as sharing in any profits which the company may make, while the money is on interest. This is the way the co-operative banks are doing business. The plan is a simple one and is the best method of saving a portion of your income that has been devised. Any one can put into a portion of purchasing a home in less than seven years from the first day you invested your first dollar.

Total Cost is $1,127.49.

The total cost of getting a thousand dollars under this system of contributing interest would be $1,127.49 and after your contract matures the monthly payment would be $12, and then the home would be paid for in sixty months or two-thirds months.

The great advantage of the above plan is the low rate of interest charged. The co-operative banks are chartered institutions given in case of sickness or misfortune.

The more of such plans to aid the workingman the better, when they are conducted in business integrity, backed up by the character of the officers and directors.

All the average man needs to own his own home is a small interest charged and a chance to recognize the saving qualities of his self-denial. Any one of these plans would help you to own your home.

Would Be Valuable Roadway.

Talks on Teeth

By G. GORDON MARTIN (INCORPORATED)

Advantages of Alveolar Dentistry

When you consider how indispensable the teeth are and the suffering caused by decay, diseased gums, loose teeth, indigestion and the loss of expression, it behooves us to investigate improvements that will add to your comfort and appearance.

The discovery of the Alveolar Method, which is exclusively practiced by this company under patents in this country and foreign, proves that we are using advanced methods which do away with plates and bridges.

Advantages of Alveolar Dentistry—

First

Each tooth that we replace is supported by the alveolar ridge and instead of adding more weight to the natural teeth it is lessened by individual support—Important for the permanency.

Second

The teeth are placed SEPARATE SOCKETS—giving a natural appearance in case an accident can be replaced without removing any part of the work—Saves time and inconvenience.

Third

We protect the natural teeth in application—A stitch in time saves two.

Fourth

The Alveolar Method is painless and adapted to all cases where there are two teeth remaining in each jaw—Permanent fixtures—non-removable.

Fifth

The cost of the work is no more than crown and bridge work—The Alveolar Method has the advantage.

Read the following letter from a patient who has proven the above statements.

Only a brief summary of the Alveolar Method can be given in this limited space. OUR BOOK, "ALVEOLAR DENTISTRY," sent upon request. Personal examination and advice given without obligation.

A serious question deserves immediate attention.

$80,000 BLACKMAIL CHARGE REVEALS WEIRD TALE OF ADVENTURER.

Romance of South Africa's Million-Makers, Told by Robert Crozier Long.

ASSASSINATION. SUICIDE

Tragic and Checkered Career of Franz von Veltheim, Now Prisoner in England.

BY ROBERT CROZIER LONG,
Special Correspondent of the Boston American.

London, Feb. 1. The romance of South Africa's million-makers surpasses that of the Arabian Nights. Murder, intrigue and black suicide and assassination—even to cover how a foreign State in the form of high finance figures prominently in this tragic and checkered history.

But even Africa has produced nothing so sensational as the romance of Franz Dumpert, the two Jewels, and the mystery of the South African "naturalized American," and who is to-day in Pentonville Prison, London, awaiting trial on a charge of blackmail.

The principal figure implicated in the criminal affair where Franz von Veltheim already stood in the dock, which may send him to penal servitude for a long term of years. He was brought to the city of London from the Continent by the police under the charge that he, as an accomplice, received the sum of $80,000 from a certain notorious money lender, to stifle an action for libel which the latter had brought against the latter's wife.

It is a romance that dates back to the days of the Jameson raid, and the wealth of Barney Barnato, Beit and Rhodes, and the Kaffir boom. Franz von Veltheim, a German nobleman, was a member of the staff of Dr. Jameson when the latter made his ill-fated raid into the Transvaal. He was with Jameson when he was captured by the Boers at Krugersdorp, and was one of the prisoners who were taken to Pretoria for trial, and who were subsequently released on the payment of a fine of $125,000 each.

Von Veltheim was with Jameson when he was released from prison, and returned with him to England. Here he remained for a short time, and then went to Johannesburg, where he became associated with both Barnato and Rhodes in their mining ventures.

It was during this period that Von Veltheim met Dumpert, who was then a struggling young money lender, and who had come to Johannesburg from Germany. Dumpert was a man of very prepossessing appearance, and Von Veltheim, who was then a bachelor, became very much attracted by the girl who was afterward to become Dumpert's wife.

Von Veltheim says it was a case of love at first sight with him, and he made no secret of his admiration for the young woman. Dumpert, who was then married, encouraged the attentions of Von Veltheim, and the latter, who was then in receipt of a handsome income, was able to lend Dumpert considerable sums of money, which the latter was enabled to invest to advantage in the mining boom which followed the opening of the Rand.

Chief Holmes of Medford Calls on People to operate With Police and End Crime Carnival

For the past two months little short of a reign of terror has existed in Medford, and breaks have also occurred in Malden. And so Chief Holmes has decided to advertise for the burglars and ask the people of Medford to help him get them. The novel advertisement, the like of which has never appeared before in local papers, is as follows:

EVELYN SOBS IN ANGUISH AS JUDGE SENDS THAW TO MATTEAWAN

DRAMATIC SCENE AS JURY REPORTS VERDICT

Slayer With Ghastly Smile Listens to Foreman's Words "Not Guilty on Grounds of Insanity."

"While a tense silence fills the courtroom, the foreman of the jury slowly read the verdict: 'Not guilty, on the grounds of insanity.' Thaw turned and smiled at his wife—a sickly, ghastly smile. His eyes were staring and a cold sweat stood out on his forehead. Evelyn, with a shudder that shook her slight frame, covered her face with her hands and sobbed convulsively." From account of scene in courtroom.

Evelyn Cries Like a Child.

But when she heard the words Justice Fitzgerald muttering her fate to Matteawan, she fell back in her chair. Again she sank with emotion and this time she broke down and began to cry like a child. The tears streamed down her face. She seemed in the throes of utter grief. She shook her head as she heard anticipated shadows fall between her and her husband.

There was a touching reunion between the wife and husband after twenty-three months of separation. As soon as the lawyers began to reach an agreement the two dragged each through the crowd and sat down together. Thaw was in high spirits, and laughed and chatted with his wife. Evelyn was in tears. Thaw put his arm around her and drew her head down on his shoulder. She sobbed convulsively.

Rush for Court Room.

In the court room, pell mell like a stampeding herd of cattle, rushed the crowds when the verdict was announced. Chairs were overturned and kicked as they were knocked aside, all in the mad rush for the doors. Women were trampled upon and fainted in the excitement. Those who could get to their feet fled from the room in fear of being caught in the crush.

Through it all Thaw was calm. Then suddenly he was told that Evelyn was in distress. He hurried to her side. Her head was bowed on her breast. She was sobbing convulsively. Thaw put his arm around her and drew her head down on his shoulder. She sobbed convulsively.

Jurors Show Strain of Ordeal.

Three women jurors broke down in the court room when they were hearing words to enter. A third ran out of the room. Several of the jurors looked tired and haggard from the strain of the twelve days' deliberation. Some of them looked as if they had been through a period of death.

"Harry Thaw to the Bar."

Then K. Thaw to the bar," called out Clerk [illegible]. At that moment the deputy whose duty it is to look after Thaw stepped over and sat down beside Thaw's cot, and said: "Harry, you'll have to stand up."

"I can't," the lad whispered back. "I'm too weak."

Then the deputy, assisted by another man, helped the boy to his feet. He was pale and trembling, and as he stood there he looked the picture of misery.

"Are you ready to hear the verdict?" he was asked. "How does it read, gentlemen?" asked the deputy, turning to the jury.

A few moments later those in the court room, including Thaw, were startled by the sudden appearance of Harry Thaw. He had been brought in by the deputy. He looked the picture of misery. He stood with his head bowed down, his face pale and haggard. He looked as if he had been through a period of death.

Face Pasty and Sodden

His face was pasty and sodden, but except for the pallor and haggard look he was the same Harry Thaw that the jury had seen for the last few days. He looked neither to the right nor to the left, but stood there with his head bowed down.

Then there was a pause of the utmost solemnity, as the jury filed in and took their seats. Thaw was still standing, with his head bowed down. He looked neither to the right nor to the left, but stood there with his head bowed down.

"Gentlemen of the jury," said Clerk [illegible], "have you arrived at a verdict in the case?"

"We have," replied Greenmiels, the foreman.

"Arise, gentlemen of the jury. Arise, defendant."

Harry Thaw got to his feet, trying to look cool and defiant. He gazed steadily at Juror Hobart, the man who was said to have forced a verdict of

100,000 Shares of Treasury Stock, Par Value $5, Offered at $1.50

I offer for immediate subscription 100,000 shares of treasury stock of the Bingham Central Standard Company, par value $5 per share, at $1.50 per share.

Orders will be received for the stock in lots of 50 shares or [illegible]

The State Street Trust Company of Boston is receiver for [illegible] stock. The Federal Trust Company of Boston is transfer agent.

When this allotment of 100,000 shares of treasury stock has been distributed the stock will be listed and traded in upon the Boston Curb Exchange.

At a later end not far distant time I expect to see it listed upon the Boston Stock Exchange.

Purchasers buying at this time and at the present low price of $1.50 a share will [illegible] have an early opportunity to sell it for any reason that [illegible] do not wish to hold their stock for investment as [illegible] it will represent a very high margin of profit.

Bingham, Utah, is recognized as possessing the greatest natural and developed advantages of any copper mining camp in the United States.

The mines of the Bingham Standard Copper Company and the Bingham Central Mining Company are in the very heart of the Bingham Camp.

Adjoining the mines of the Boston Consolidated [illegible] and those of the Utah Consolidated on the east.

The Bingham Central Standard Company is the holding company for the Bingham Standard and the Bingham Central. Samuel Newhouse controls a majority of the stock, is the president of this company. D. C. Jackling, general manager of the Utah Copper Company, is the vice president and general manager.

The Bingham Central Standard Company is conservatively capitalized at $500,000. There are 1,000,000 shares of a par value of $5 each.

The properties of the Bingham Central Standard Company contain 510 acres, and according to the estimates of reputable mining engineers there is at the present time exposed in the workings of the combined properties not less than 150,000,000 tons of ore that can be marketed at a substantial profit the moment the Copper Belt line is extended from the Boston Consolidated dump, a very short distance.

In addition to these funds with which to complete the development of these mines and place them upon a producing basis, the 100,000 shares of treasury stock now offered by me in my hands for public sale will provide all the money necessary for the development and construction of the mines of the Bingham Central Standard Company.

The three sides of the mines of the Bingham Central Standard Company are famous mines, whose stock sells far above par. Something of the prospects of the Bingham Central Standard Copper may be judged by the history of these properties.

The Bingham Central Standard's properties are bounded on the west by the properties of the Bingham & New Haven Copper & Gold Mining Company and the Utah Consolidated Mining Company; on the north by the Boston Consolidated Copper Company; on the east by the United States Mining Company & the Last Chance group. The southerly end of the [illegible] adjoins the only portion of it not directly connected with a well-developed and producing mine.

Samuel Newhouse developed the Utah Consolidated Mining Company. Its stock, listed on the Boston Stock Exchange, is of a par value of $5, and is selling at 39.

Samuel Newhouse developed the Boston Consolidated Copper Company. Its stock, traded in on the Boston Stock Exchange, is of a par value of $10 and is selling at 27½.

Samuel Newhouse is president and D. C. Jackling the vice president and general manager of the Bingham Central Standard Company, whose treasury stock I now offer. The future may often be foreseen by a study of the past.

Every person familiar in the slightest degree with copper knows something of the life of Samuel Newhouse. His was the energy that made possible the famous Newhouse tunnel in Colorado—his the hand that directed the Newhouse mines and smelters to success—his the direction that has placed the Boston Consolidated, the Utah Consolidated and the Cactus among the greatest mining enterprises of the world.

He and his associates are one and all men whose names stand for accomplishment—for results—for doing things for success. The corporation of whose head Mr. Newhouse stands now promises well in the world of finance as sound and well managed.

I have carefully investigated the proposition before offering it to investors. Competent authorities report that they expect to see this group of mines become the equal of any in the Bingham Camp, which is a large thing to say of any property and one that must recommend it.

I am justified, from the reports made me in believing that the stock of the Bingham Central Standard Company will prove a good investment, and that its price will advance steadily when public trading is commenced in the stock on the Boston Curb. I expect to see it sell at $1 per share in 30 days.

I recommend the purchase of Bingham Central Standard stock at the price at which I am enabled to offer it, and I believe that the time will be very short before my allotment of 100,000 shares will be absolutely exhausted and the opportunity to buy the stock at $1.50 or any similar price will be over.

The par value of the stock of the Bingham Central Standard Company is $5 per share. I believe the stock to be such an investment on a long pull its full par value to-day. I believe it would be just as easy on account of the exceptional high character and reputation of its management, to sell this stock at $5 per share as it is to sell it at $1.50 or $1.75 per share. I am glad, however, to be able to offer the stock at such a low price as will enable everyone to get only somewhat reasonable investment, but to make exceedingly high profits if they desire at an early date to sell. And, because I am in position to offer the stock at such a low figure, I feel sure that every share placed with me for subscription will be taken before the end of the week. Therefore, investors and speculators alike, desiring to benefit by this extraordinary proposition, must act in the matter at once.

Address all communications to me personally and make all remittances payable to my order

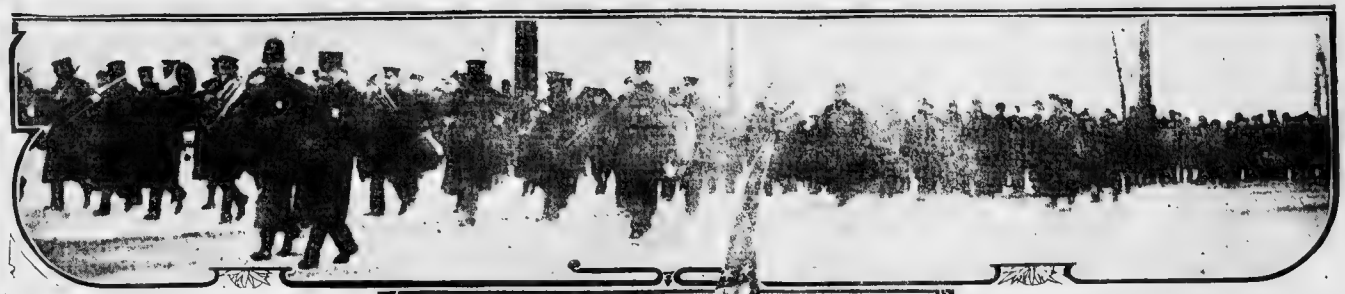
ARMY OF BOYS BRAVE STORM IN WESTON WALK TO CAMBRIDGE



REPUBLICANS SULLEN OVER ROOSEVELT COUP

Congressmen Foresee Special Session Unless President's Measures are Acted Upon.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 1. Republican members of the Senate and House who are opposed to the President are in a sullen and ugly mood tonight. They have had time to reflect over the special message sent to both houses of Congress by the President yesterday, and the more they have reflected, the more angry they have become.

[illegible] side of these conferences, which has grown more pronounced daily since the President issued his statement that he would not be a candidate for re-election, has disappeared entirely. All talk of defying the President openly and facing down his appointments at will has stopped. Instead they are asking each other what will he do next.

Plans Special Congress?

[illegible] upon extraordinary session of Congress [illegible] President Roosevelt [illegible] were talked over [illegible] last few days are based upon the belief that the President will call a special session of Congress [illegible] after the Republican National Convention [illegible] Republican Senators and Representatives who will be renominated and re-elected overwhelmingly. Republicans of the Republican Senators, whose terms expire with the election of 1908, such as Hopkins of Illinois, Burkett of Nebraska, Foraker of Ohio, Burrows of Michigan, Kittredge of South Dakota, Dolliver of Iowa, Penrose of Pennsylvania, Platt and Stephenson of New York, Wetmore of Rhode Island, Gamble of South Dakota, Scott of West Virginia, Hughes of New York, declare emphatically against the special session, and Spooner of Wisconsin has always been opposed to calling Congress together in extraordinary session.

Senator Aldrich of Rhode Island, Republican leader of the Senate, has not yet expressed himself on the subject, but it is known that he is opposed to the calling of a special session. Senator Lodge of Massachusetts, Republican leader of the House, has not yet been seen by any of the Republicans who are opposed to the President, but it is known that he is opposed to the calling of a special session. Senator Hale of Maine, Republican leader of the Senate, has not yet been seen by any of the Republicans who are opposed to the President, but it is known that he is opposed to the calling of a special session.

Democrats Jubilant.

The President's message promises to be more than a nine days' wonder. Representative Henry (Democrat) of Texas, to-night is circulating a paper for signatures of Democratic caucus. The Democratic [illegible] His idea is to have a caucus [illegible] endorsed by [illegible] and get it [illegible] Democrats [illegible] Democrats [illegible] Democrats

NOW WOULD YOU WANT TO BE SO CARELESS IN HANDLING BEES?

There's a Way to Do it and Not Get Stung But in Took Mr. Latham 20 years to Learn.

Paradoxical as it may seem, the best way to avoid being "stung" in these uncertain days is not to keep bees.

It's just [illegible] to [illegible] a bee expert talking about bees to the layman at [illegible]. The Fight and Alex way they tell about handling bees, cleverly handling them, about having and breeding and watching can about getting into a bees confidence and handling it, but it don't work with his and about making up to bee fronts generally is enough to give one the creeps. It seems so reckless.

And then, don't [illegible] being stung, except in a [illegible] way, due to some [illegible] Bees Legit.

Now the Massachusetts Bee Keepers' Association comprises some sixty excellent and worthy people who keep bees as a business or as a side line to farming and fruit growing. They meet once a month and talk bees from a standpoint of culinary that is [illegible] knowledge.

ARE YOU UP TO OR BEHIND THE TIMES ON PIANO BUYING

Are you thinking of buying a piano of some special make—a piano that has a good reputation—one that everyone knows is a first-class make? If you are, you are just the person to whom we wish to say "don't pay too much for it"—you will be asked a good round price for it unless you get it of us. We are in no trade or financial combination to keep the prices of pianos up—the name on a piano means much—it guarantees the instrument—but when the piano gets to our sacrifice floor the name is not considered. When we cut the price, we cut all alike—and we cut deep. You buy while we cut.

$5 Down—$1 a Week

The gilded piano stores, with their costly appointments, their high-salaried sales agents, their sellers' commissions, etc., are no place for the economical piano buyer to go. Take the trouble to look around a little, go up where the rents are not so high and buy your piano right.

WORLD FAMED MERRY WIDOW WALTZ

Words for Season's Musical Hit by Beatrice Fairfax

SOFTLY calling,
The enthralling
Music chants.
Come and glide dear,
Lightly glide, dear,
Through the dance.
When I hold you close, dear,
Skies seem ever blue.
All the world seems made for love
And just us two.

In Love's Paradise we will live,
While the perfume of Spring fills the air.
We are borne along on the wings of a song.
(Musical interlude.)

Let sadness take flight for the day.
There is naught in the world that will harm.
With young hearts of May we will dance care away,
And laughed at grim Winter's alarm.

II.

WE'LL go swinging
Gayly winging
On our way;
Lights are flashing,
And the plashing
Fountains play.
Through the room we'll whirl dear.
Happy moments through;
Gladly, gladly will I come
And waltz with you.

What is life without music and song?
What is love if there's sorrow as well?
There is joy on the wing—catch it all who can sing.
(Musical interlude.)

May the rose's blush color our dreams,
As our hearts with the melody thrill,
And we'll dance by bright streams, where the merry sunbeams
Splash gold o'er each rippling rill.

III.

LEAVE all sorrow
For to-morrow,
What care we?
Care and troubles
Are but bubbles;
Let them flee.
While the music calls us,
Heaven smiles above;
I forgot all else, my own,
But you and love.

With hearts ever young, let us dance
As long as the music holds sway,
Your hand, dear, in mine, and my soul's love thine.
(Musical interlude.)

And memory shall cherish the joy,
To give forth again in the years,
When our dancing is o'er and we draw on her store
Of the sweet past that banishes tears.
